

ONLY SIX DAYS MORE!

Store Crowded From Morning To Night With Enthusiastic Shoppers

We are loaded to death and must unload within the next six days regardless of COST

Last January we bought a tremendous line of Fancy China for our wholesale department from a factory in the old country, with the understanding the shipment would reach us by August or September, which would give our salesmen on the road ample time to turn the whole shipment before they quit the road December 1, for the holidays.

Now Listen; Here's What Happened

The first shipment of this enormous purchase reached us November 15. (Our men were then out on their last two weeks trip) The second shipment December 7, (after our men had quit for the holidays) The last shipment reached us December 14.

Of course we kicked, yes and we even refused it and said things. The B. & O. proved that they handled the shipment with dispatch, the factory in the old country proved that they delivered the shipment to the steamship line, early in July and in plenty of time to have reached us by the required time

Then the Real Thing Happened

The steamship company called our attention to clause of their contract written on the back of the receipt in such small type an ordinary person would never see, ("we guarantee prompt delivery of all goods etc., except unavoidable delays, caused by strikes, lock-outs, fires, storms, lightning etc.") so we had to take it. If we could have had this shipment on time every piece would have been sold at a small profit by this time

Now Here's What We Propose to Do: Turn Our Bad Luck Into Good Luck for You

Let our misfortune be your gain. Come in, you will see under the tables, on top, tucked away in every hole and corner, most beautiful line of presents you ever saw.
